What is the Obstetrics & Gynecology Emergency Room?

The OB/GYN ER offers immediate assessment and intervention for women experiencing acute obstetric and gynecologic problems, including:

- Pre-term labor.
- Prenatal conditions.
- Pelvic pain.
- Abnormal vaginal bleeding.
- Urological conditions, such as bladder or urinary tract infections.

What happens in the OB/GYN Emergency Room?

- Upon arrival, a physician and midwife will assess your general health, pregnancy and delivery progress.
- In the reception room, your medical history will be taken. Your contractions will be monitored, your blood pressure will be examined , and the fetal heartbeat will be checked
- If labor has not begun, you will be released. You must obtain a release form from a doctor, so that the health fund will pay for your visit.
- If you have gone into labor, you will be taken to the delivery room, which is staffed by doctors from the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology and licensed midwives. A pediatrician and an anesthesiologist are also on-call around-the clock.
